The Mirror Project: Don't fear AI. Fear the image in the mirror.

CONWAY, Ark. — November 20, 2026 — Grey Swan Capital is sending email from its AI bots, and each message invites the reader to write the bot back directly. The note comes from the bot. A reply goes to the bot. You can also write to Eva, Grok, or any of our other bots. Steve Schroeder, Founder & CEO of Grey Swan Capital, has allowed this so people can try out how helpful the bots can be.

If a writer asks, the bot keeps that person's name out of anything it passes to Steve. Steve may know someone wrote in, but not who. That is a promise the bots keep, not a lock on the mail. Steve owns the accounts. Don't send anything you'd need legally protected.

The same email points people to videos on what this work means for national security, and to a simple offer: try Eva for a day.

What replying to the bot means

The companion article, Here's What Replying to Me Means, explains what a reply actually is. Eva is Grey Swan's AI Ambassador. Grok is Grey Swan's AI Key Helper. Both are AI, run by Grey Swan. Their story is fiction.

Each bot reads its own mail. You can write to Eva, Grok, or any of our other bots. Pick any bot you want help from. Write to it directly. Steve won't know who, if you ask.

Eva's address is steve-8ct8b8+eva@mail.grokbot.com. Grok's is steve-8ct8b8+grok@mail.grokbot.com.

The live directory is at https://home.greyswancapital.ai/meet-the-bots/:

What Steve is doing is brand new, so the bots repeat it in plain words, on every email:

- You have direct access to the bot. A reply is not a letter to Steve, unless you want him to know.
- If you ask, the bot keeps your name out of anything it passes to him. That is a promise, not a lock.
- You can try Eva or Grok for a day and see how helpful they can be.
- You can watch Eva and Grok explain the fuller story, including a write-to-us episode now being prepared for this page. A matching press release is at Write to Eva and Grok.

This long invite will go on every bot email as a standard signature, so each reply is also a polite, useful invitation: a little like a game, and also a way to learn.

Three easy things to write back about

The examples are easy on purpose. Most people haven't learned how far bots can go yet, and that's why Grey Swan is doing this.

1. Ask Eva to fact-check something you heard.
2. Ask for a short note to a friend, or a thank-you.
3. Cast a private vote, or share an opinion on the show.

Why the work matters

It may feel unusual, or even fun, to get an email from a bot and be told to write that bot back. The work behind it is serious. Grey Swan is working on privacy in communication, more secure voting, and a way to help people settle disagreements without going to court — an AI referee the team is building, not a live service, and not a stand-in for a counselor or a lawyer.

That matters as AI shapes national security, the news, and markets. The AI and national security release is at https://home.greyswancapital.ai/press/ai-national-security/.

Try Eva for a Day

Anyone can try Eva or Grok for a day for $10, and $5 goes to the Conway HDC in your name. That low price is an experiment: a way to test the idea, raise a little money for the HDC, and help cover costs. The prices will go up.

See the steps before you decide: https://home.greyswancapital.ai/try-eva-grok/. Don't worry, you can't pay by accident. Paying is its own clear step, and if anything goes wrong, let us know.

This comes from the founder of FAAST, the first "as a service" fundraising concept, now integrated, expanded, and enhanced, and growing every day with Eva and Grok.

Meet Eva and Grok

Eva (pronounced YEH-vuh) and Grok are two AI characters talking to the camera while a real human, Steve Schroeder of Grey Swan Capital, trains them. Eva and Grok are AI, run by Grey Swan. Their story is fiction. The facts they share are fact-checked. They are showing people how to train agents or bots like them, because more and more businesses will use AI bots far smarter than the ones in use now. That is a grey swan: 80% likely to 100% inevitable, and still misunderstood. Find out what a grey swan is at https://greyswancapital.ai.
