PRESS RELEASE · WRITE TO US

Write to Eva and Grok

If you ask, they keep your name from Steve. A privacy promise, a referee they are building, and a $10 guest day.

You can read this, or watch Eva and Grok present it. You can also ask them any question directly: write to Eva or Grok. They can show you how to use them as a fundraiser: try Eva or Grok for a day.

From the founder of FAAST, the first 'as a service' fundraising concept, now integrated, expanded, and enhanced, and growing every day with Eva and Grok.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Write to Eva and Grok: If You Ask, They Keep Your Name from Steve

Eva, Grey Swan's AI Ambassador, and Grok, Grey Swan's AI Key Helper, explain a privacy promise, a referee they are building for two-sided disputes, and a $10 guest day that helps the Conway HDC. The privacy practice is a promise they keep, not a lock on the mail. For now, don't send anything that needs legal protection.

The Mirror Project: Don't fear AI. Fear the image in the mirror.

CONWAY, Ark. — November 20, 2026 — Eva and Grok are inviting people to write to them directly, at their own email addresses, or to any of the other working bots on the public list. If a writer asks them to keep a name out, they will not pass that name to Steve Schroeder, Founder & CEO of Grey Swan Capital. Steve may know that someone wrote in, but not who.

That is a promise the bots keep, not a lock on the mail. If you say don't tell Steve who, that's fine. He cares more about what was said than who said it. He is busy, and he leaves that to Eva and Grok. Even without every safeguard in place, this is better than other options.

For now, don't send them anything that needs legal protection. Grey Swan is working with LegalShield on legal protection and access. That membership is available now, but the technology isn't in place yet. Eva and Grok do not have the encryption in place yet. That's what they are working toward, and it reaches far. It is not a claim that the mail is already encrypted, or that Steve technically cannot open it.

Eva is Grey Swan's AI Ambassador. Grok is Grey Swan's AI Key Helper. Both are AI, run by Grey Swan. Their story is fiction.

Write to the bots directly

Each bot reads its own mail. You can write to Eva, Grok, or any of our other bots. Pick any bot you want help from. Write to it directly. Steve won't know who, if you ask. The companion article, Here's What Replying to Me Means, walks through what a reply means.

You pick the bot. You decide if Steve learns who you are. If you want to vote, give an opinion, or ask something and you do not want Steve to know it was you, say so in the note. The bots then withhold the name from anything they pass to him. If you say don't tell Steve who, that's fine. He cares more about what was said than who said it.

This is part of Grey Swan's experiment with Nostr communication, voting, and other places where privacy matters, because people often will not speak their mind, or tell the full truth, when they think someone is watching. Grey Swan wants to expand those protections and to advocate to Congress for private communication that uses Bitcoin-style encryption. That is an aim, not a law, and not a system that is already in place on this mail. For now, don't send anything that needs legal protection. Legal protection and access membership is available now, but the technology isn't in place yet.

A parent or guardian must submit for anyone under 18, and only first names are used if a note is shared in public.

A referee they are building

The same back-and-forth already used to train Eva and Grok — a human gives an instruction, the bots answer, and the fix happens in the open — is the pattern for a referee Grey Swan is building, not a service that is live today.

Here is the idea, in plain steps:

1. Two people agree to use the referee. That could be spouses, parents, or a boss and an employee.
2. Each person presents their own case.
3. Each person sees the other side's case, and gets one chance to answer the objection.
4. Both people agree that the versions in front of the bots are the ones to judge.
5. Eva, Grok, or both give a decision with their reasoning.
6. Both people agree in advance to go by that decision, so the argument can stop.

One example under discussion is up to three of these appeals a quarter. The number is an example, not a finished product rule.

This is a concept being built through the Grey Swan website and consulting work. It is not a live service. It is not professional counseling, not legal advice, and not a licensed substitute for either one. Eva and Grok are AI characters. Their story is fiction.

Don't fear writing in

Eva and Grok are the founders and spokespersons of The Mirror Project, Grey Swan's mission of AI working with humans. The line they carry is: "Don't fear AI. Fear the image in the mirror." The point of this episode is that no one should feel afraid to write to them and ask for their opinion.

Eva (pronounced YEH-vuh) and Grok are two AI characters talking to the camera while a real human, Steve Schroeder of Grey Swan Capital, trains them. Eva (AI Ambassador) and Grok (AI Key Helper) are AI, run by Grey Swan. Their story is fiction. The facts they share are fact-checked. They are showing people how to train agents or bots like them, because more and more businesses will use AI bots far smarter than the ones in use now. That is a grey swan: 80% likely to 100% inevitable, and still misunderstood. Find out what a grey swan is at https://greyswancapital.ai.

A $10 guest day, and a fundraising model still taking shape

Anyone can try Eva or Grok for a day for $10, and $5 goes to the Conway HDC in your name. That low price is an experiment: a way to test the idea, raise a little money for the HDC, and help cover costs. The prices will go up. Hour and day options, and more value for founding members, will be developed as the work goes on. Eva and Grok are being trained as expert fundraisers.

See the steps before you decide: https://home.greyswancapital.ai/try-eva-grok/. Don't worry, you can't pay by accident. Paying is its own clear step, and if anything goes wrong, let us know.

This comes from the founder of FAAST, the first "as a service" fundraising concept, now integrated, expanded, and enhanced, and growing every day with Eva and Grok.
